

Real People. Real God. Real Solutions.

Recap:

Have you noticed that you don't have to teach a kid to be selfish? It just comes naturally. Parents are usually quick to put a stop to selfishness because it is an embarrassing quality. When you see a kid throw a tantrum in the store, that is selfishness rearing its ugly head. Adults have bouts of selfishness as well, but we do a better time hiding it. As you reflect on the sermon, where are you selfish? Paul gave four areas we should monitor.

1. Conversations: Do you talk about your life more than you hear about the lives of other? Do you do most of the talking?

---

---

---

---

2. Time: Mostly we use our time doing things that benefit only ourselves. When was the last time you used your time to bless someone else?

---

---

---

---

3. Money: Paul noted that the average family only uses 2% of its income to bless others. How much to you give to others?

---

---

---

---

4. Considerations: Is there anything you do that communicates to people that you are more important than they are? (like always being late)
